Student Hotspotting

Training the next generation of complex care providers

What is Student Hotspotting?

The Interprofessional Student Hotspotting Learning Collaborative is an annual program that trains interdisciplinary teams of professional students from schools around the country to address complex medical and social needs using a patient-centered approach.

Student Hotspotting is part of the Camden Coalition of Healthcare Providers' effort to educate and provide mentorship for the next generation of health care professionals, and is run through our National Center for Complex Health and Social Needs.

Student Hotspotting hubs

Four regional hubs operate the Student Hotspotting program for teams within and outside their institutions. In partnership with the Camden Coalition and the National Center, each hub is responsible for managing and hosting student teams, and for advancing the field of complex care in their communities. The hub institutions are:

- Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia, PA
- Southern Illinois University in Springfield, IL
- University of Utah in Salt Lake City, UT
- Samuel Merritt University in Oakland, CA

Start a Student Hotspotting team

Student teams participate in monthly case conferencing, receive mentoring, gain access to tools and resources that help guide their learning and training within the online curriculum, and interact with experts in the field of complex care through round table discussions. Students or faculty interested in setting up a Hotspotting team at their institution should contact studenthotspotting@camdenhealth.org. More information about the program can be found on our website at www.nationalcomplex.care/offerings/student-hotspotting.

About the Camden Coalition of Healthcare Providers

We are a multidisciplinary nonprofit working to improve care for people with complex health and social needs in Camden, NJ, and across the country. The Camden Coalition works to advance the field of complex care by implementing person-centered programs and piloting new models that address chronic illness and social barriers to health and wellbeing. Supported by a robust data infrastructure, cross-sector convening, and shared learning, our community-based programs deliver better care to the most vulnerable individuals in Camden and regionally.

Through our National Center for Complex Health and Social Needs (National Center), the Camden Coalition works to build the field of complex care across the country. Launched in 2016, the National Center exists to inspire people to join the complex care community, connect complex care practitioners with each other, and support the field with tools and resources that move the field of complex care forward.
